Good Afternoon Brian:

I sincerely hope that my inability to wait until Monday has not inconvenienced you too much. If so, I sincerely apologize, because I'd like to think that we will be able to bend the rules with one another from time to time. I'm merely trying to provide efficiency on this project to all involved without any disruption of expectations.

We are moving progressively ahead as you will be receiving a written update of all progress any day now. Again, I regret disappointing you, and perhaps in the future I will be better situated in order for me to be more accomodating should something simular occurs.

I truly look forward to building a rewarding business relationship between us.

Thank You,
Sheila
